

DEI statement for JSSS

All are welcome here.

The Jungian Society for Scholarly Studies respects and honors differences in age, ethnicity, faith, gender identity, race, sexual orientation, and worldview because everyone thrives when our differences are recognized, respected, and valued.

We are engaged in three important efforts to support and sustain diversity, equity, and inclusion. One, to decolonize Jungian language inherited from classical psychological theory. Two, to actively seek research from historically under-represented groups, thereby broadening psychological discourse. Three, to explore the inherent diversity of psyche by welcoming its many manifestations in individuals, communities, and the biosphere.

To support this effort, we encourage our members to practice curiosity, tolerance, and forgiveness. We invite all to assume good intent, be slow in taking offense, and be gentle in offering needed correction, as we move together toward the future of Jungian scholarship.
